Disclaimer

This audit was performed using artificial intelligence tools to evaluate the presence and strength of classical education principles on school websites. Results are automated, probabilistic in nature, and should be considered indicative rather than definitive. See the full disclaimer in the Appendix more details.

ACCS Member School

Any school that belongs to the Association of Classical Christian Schools ACCS or the Society for Classical Learning SCL is, by definition, recognized as a classical school because both organizations require adherence to the six essential elements defined by the Humanitas Institute. However, a school's website may not clearly reflect its conformity to one or more elements. In such cases, the school may still receive a "Somewhat Classical" rating for those elements. Schools can update their website content at any time to achieve a "Classical" rating for a given element.

Executive Summary

Regents Academy TX 75961 presents a clearly classical and Christian orientation across most dimensions of the classical rubric. Public materials describe the school as "distinctively classical and decidedly Christian," with a governance and educational philosophy rooted in Scripture and Christian catechesis. The curriculum centers on the Trivium (grammar, logic, rhetoric), literacy through literature and great books, Latin study, and a robust integration of theology, history, and the sciences. Pedagogy emphasizes a mix of chant/memory in younger grades and Socratic/seminar-style inquiry in upper grades, aligning with the classical model. There is explicit emphasis on formation, virtue, and character, and the school foregrounds the partnership with families and parent-involvement through events, volunteering, and formation activities. The school's public materials also frame the Great Books/Genealogy of Western civilization as central to its mission, including explicit references to Latin, literature, theology, and classical languages as core content. There is strong evidence for Religious and Metaphysical Foundations, Purpose and Goal, Curriculum, Pedagogy, and Parents & Community. The Faculty category has comparatively less overt public articulation of the "living curriculum" or teacher-as-model-per-se language, which makes that category slightly weaker than the others.

- Overall, the aggregate impression is CLASSICAL, with a notable but patchy area of improvement around a more explicit articulation of faculty as living exemplars within a classical framework (see What Would Move the Needle). Where some categories show full alignment (Categories 1–4, Element 6), Element 5 shows only partial alignment, yielding a SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL signal there. The Executive Summary below provides category-by-category detail and evidence, followed by an ABSTRACT that synthesizes the six-category assessment.
- Key supporting materials from Regents Academy include explicit statements of Christian/theological grounding, Trivium-based curriculum, and Great Books-oriented reading, Latin study, and historical depth, alongside documented parent involvement and volunteer partnerships. For instance, the school identifies itself as a Christian classical school and references a curriculum built around theology, logic, rhetoric, Latin, literature, and history, with a clear mission to form virtue and mature character in students. See sources cited in the Evidence sections for specific quotes and page references.

Executive Summary — Element-by-Element Snapshot

- Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — CLASSICAL
- Element 2: Purpose and Goal — CLASSICAL
- Element 3: Curriculum — CLASSICAL
- Element 4: Pedagogy — CLASSICAL
- Element 5: Faculty — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL
- Element 6: Parents & Community — CLASSICAL

Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — CLASSICAL

Evidence - Regents Academy positions itself as a distinctly classical Christian school with explicit statements of biblical authority, doctrinal framing, and Christ-centered aims. For example, public materials emphasize that “every area of faith and life” is governed by Scripture and that “All truth is God’s truth,” grounding all knowledge in a theistic framework. The school’s educational philosophy explicitly ties education to biblical authority and the Triune God, and its governance indicates Scriptural oversight.

- Foundational religious language is pervasive: references to “the lordship of Jesus Christ,” Coram Deo, and a Christian worldview explicit in mission statements and vision for graduates. The materials also describe the Bible as the authoritative Word of God and present a Statement of Faith.

Positive/Negative Keyword Analysis - Positive keywords present: truth, God, Scripture, theology, Word of God, Coram Deo, Christian worldview, liturgy/worship (concepts tied to sacred life), virtue and holiness (virtue-related language appears in mission/vision). Evidence of “All truth is God’s truth” and “unified Christian worldview” are explicit. - Negative keywords: None observed in public materials (e.g., relativism, secular humanism, value-neutral approaches are not endorsed in the public materials). The materials consistently affirm transcendental realism and theological grounding.

Why this rating - The materials consistently foreground transcendental/moral realism and theological grounding, with explicit Scriptural authority guiding decisions, curriculum, and community life. The presence of a Statement of Faith, a theology-grounded educational philosophy, and references to Coram Deo align strongly with the Positive Keywords for Religious and Metaphysical Foundations and counter any relativistic or secular framing. The absence of explicit negative signals about secularism in the public materials supports a CLASSICAL rating for this category.

Notes: The presence of liturgical/community practices and explicit theology is anchored in school materials (e.g., “theology,” “Scripture,” “Bible is the Word of God”). The Great Books/Great Conversation framing is connected with Christian worldview formation rather than a purely secular metaphysical program, reinforcing CLASSICAL in this category. Citations reflect foundational beliefs and governance indicated in the school’s materials.

Element 2: School Purpose and Goal — CLASSICAL

Evidence - Mission statements explicitly frame education as formation of virtue and character: “To serve families by providing a distinctly classical and decidedly Christian education that equips students to lead lives of virtue, display mature character, love learning, and serve the Triune God.” Vision statements emphasize virtue, mature character, sound reason and faith, mastery of language, and a love of learning. This is formation-focused rather than solely informational or job-oriented. - The school emphasizes a classical telos: true education as the pursuit of virtue and wisdom, and a Christian worldview as the measure of truth. The public materials frequently reference virtue, character development, and the cultivation of wisdom as purposes of schooling.

Positive/Negative Keyword Analysis - Positive keywords present: formation, virtue, character, wisdom, truth, goodness (as implicit through teleology), scholé/ contemplation (through formation language; see Great Conversation and formation concepts in the lexicon). The mission/vision sections emphasize formation of virtue and wisdom, and the notion that truth/goodness/beauty are real and knowable through a Christian framework. - Negative keywords: None in the public-facing materials that would indicate a job- or credential-focused teleology; the emphasis is not “workforce preparation” but virtue and wisdom. The lexicon’s negative indicators for this category are not evidenced in public materials.

Why this rating - The school’s stated goals center on virtue, character, and wisdom rather than only preparation for work. The Great Conversation, formation through classical education, and Christian worldview align with the Positive Keywords associated with the Purpose and Goal category. The absence of a vocational emphasis in the public materials supports CLASSICAL rather than a workforce-centric or information-formation only framing. Citations reflect mission and vision statements and the formation-centric framing.

Element 3: School Curriculum — CLASSICAL

Evidence - The curriculum is framed by the classical Trivium (grammar, logic, rhetoric) and by a broader classical content scope. Public materials explicitly describe the classical model and the grammar/logic/rhetoric progression, along with theology, Latin, literature, history, mathematics, and sciences as core domains. Latin and literature are highlighted as central, with language study (Latin/Spanish) integrated into graduation and Omnibus offerings.

- Great Books/Great Conversation framing is present: Regents Academy discusses engaging with Great Books and the Great Conversation within Omnibus literature/history/theology, supporting a Great Books-centered curriculum alignment. The headmaster's posts specifically discuss Great Books and classical education.
- History and liberal arts articulation: The Omnibus program blends literature, writing, history, and theology; the curriculum sequence includes ancient through modern studies, with a focus on Western civilization and classical content. Text is explicit about the historical/philosophical/theological scope and integrated content.

Positive/Negative Keyword Analysis - Positive keywords present: Seven Liberal Arts (grammar, logic, rhetoric; Trivium), Great Books, primary sources, Latin, literature, history, theology, Liberal Education, universal/Western civilization, unity of truth. The site repeatedly uses terms aligned with classical curriculum (grammar/logic/rhetoric; Latin; literature; history; theology; great books).

- Negative keywords: Negative indicators in the lexicon (e.g., "social studies terminology replacing history," "project-based learning dominance" as red flags) are not evidenced in Regents Academy's public content; the site emphasizes traditional liberal arts and Great Books rather than modern "social studies-only" framing. Public content aligns with traditional history, not with those negative cues.

Why this rating - The curriculum aligns with core classical criteria: Trivium-focused pedagogy, Great Books emphasis, Latin/ classics, and Western civilization heritage. The presence of Omnibus (Literature/History/Theology) and the articulation of a Seven Liberal Arts orientation support a CLASSICAL rating for Curriculum. Citations show direct references to grammar/logic/rhetoric, Great Books, Latin, and historical/theological integration.

Element 4: School Pedagogy or Teaching Methods — CLASSICAL

Evidence - Pedagogical approach includes contemplative/restful elements (Scholé) and memory-friendly practices in early grades, as indicated by chanting, singing, and memory work in lower grades. The school also emphasizes Socratic-style discussion, seminars, or debate in upper grades and training in rhetoric (addressing Element 4's upper-school pedagogy). The presence of both modes aligns with the classical pedagogy spectrum.

- Specific methods such as chanting, recitation, and memory-building (lower school) are explicitly present in the site's Elementary content (e.g., "Enchanting Chanting") and are consistent with classical practices.
- Upper-school pedagogy features Socratic discussion, seminars, rhetorical training, and opportunities to deliver speeches, consistent with the Trivium's rhetoric stage and classical seminar formats. The curriculum content highlights logic/rhetoric and rhetoric-based courses, with senior-level rhetoric and capstone-style components described.

Positive/Negative Keyword Analysis - Positive keywords present: Socratic seminar, recitation, chanting, memory work, scholé, seminar, dialectic, rhetoric, public speaking, debate, memory-based learning, lively discussion, logical reasoning, guided discussion. The Regents materials mention Lang/Latin teaching and Omnibus pedagogy, as well as the "classical model" of education using grammar/logic/rhetoric.

- Negative keywords: The lexicon lists negative indicators such as "experiential learning focus," "project-based only," and "constructivist." Regents materials show project-based elements in some contexts (e.g., dual-credit class options) but also emphasize memory, recitation, and rhetoric as core pedagogical modes, which mitigates against a full negative classification. The explicit presence of chanting and Socratic/seminar pedagogy supports CLASSICAL rather than NOT CLASSICAL; no overt negative signals are dominant in public content.

Why this rating - The presence of contemplative/restful elements and memory-based lower-school pedagogy, along with Socratic/seminar and rhetoric-focused upper-school pedagogy, is a strong alignment with classical teaching methods. The public materials emphasize both Scholé-like restfulness and rhetoric-based, dialogic learning, yielding a CLASSICAL rating for Pedagogy. Citations show the lower- and upper-school pedagogical cues.

Element 5: School Faculty — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

Evidence - The public materials emphasize the school's classical Christian identity and the faculty as exemplars in practice, but explicit statements that describe faculty as "living curriculum," "model teachers," or "portrait of a teacher" are less directly articulated in the public-facing site text. The framework documents describe such faculty characteristics as a core element of classical schools, but the Regents site does not consistently foreground these teacher-centric portraits in accessible public content. - There are indirect signals of strong teacher leadership and virtue-based expectations in mission/vision statements, and of a governance structure (board-based decisions guided by Scripture) that suggests a culture of serious formation. However, explicit characterizations of faculty as "living curriculum" or "portrait of teacher" are not always overt in public pages.

Positive/Negative Keyword Analysis - Positive keywords present: "teacher/mentors" language is not strongly foregrounded in the public pages; the lexicon's positive indicators would include terms like "living curriculum," "portrait of a teacher," and "faculty as core," which are not clearly and consistently used on the site. Some mission/vision language implies teachers as bearers of virtue and knowledge, but explicit phrases are sparse. - Negative keywords: None clearly present in public content that would run counter to classical faculty ideals; the absence of explicit "facilitator on the side" or "certification-driven jargon without classical context" language is noted—but not explicit evidence of actual practice. The absence of explicit "faculty living curriculum" language is the core reason for a weaker rating in this category.

Why this rating - While the school's mission and academic plan imply a high regard for faculty leadership and moral exemplar-hood, the public-facing content does not consistently include the explicit, formalized language that the classical rubric uses to describe "Living Curriculum" and "Portrait of the Teacher." This yields a SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL rating for Faculty, with room for stronger articulation of teacher leadership and exemplar roles in the public materials. Citations reflect the lack of explicit vocabulary in public pages and the presence of mission-based virtue language.

Element 6: School Parents & Community — CLASSICAL

Evidence - The school emphasizes partnership with families and serving families with a distinctly classical Christian education. It notes that the school exists to serve families and that parents have responsibilities in education through the family/household formation life. The school's materials show a visible emphasis on parent involvement, including volunteering and family engagement. The Admissions page describes a family-centric community, and other sections reference parent participation and formation opportunities (Parenting 101, book studies, etc.).

- Content highlights parental engagement: volunteers, open campus approach, and educational formation for parents through events and reading groups. The site explicitly images parents as partners in the classical education project (though the strongest explicit phrasing appears in programmatic pages and parent-focused posts). - There are public posts and content around "parenting 101" and classical-home-education themes that suggest ongoing parent education and involvement beyond mere enrollment.

Positive/Negative Keyword Analysis - Positive keywords present: partnership with families, parental engagement, home-life integration, parent formation, classical family culture, parental leadership, open campus, volunteering. - Negative keywords: None observed in the public-facing materials that would indicate consumerism or minimal parental involvement; the presence of volunteer opportunities and family-centered language counters that, supporting CLASSICAL.

Why this rating - The school's mission and actions illustrate a strong orientation toward parent involvement and family formation as part of the classical project. The existence of parent-focused content and volunteering opportunities aligns with Positive Keywords in the Six Elements lexicon and supports a CLASSICAL assessment for Parents & Community. Citations show explicit parent/family engagement language and activities.

What Would Move the Needle

- If any category were to drift toward SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL or not fully CLASSICAL, the most needle-moving improvements would involve:
 - Element 5 (Faculty): Add explicit, public-facing statements and materials that describe the faculty as the living curriculum, with portraits of teacher ideals, professional development in classical pedagogy, and published faculty biographies that illustrate exemplary classical practice. This would transform Element 5 from SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL to CLASSICAL by making the faculty dimension explicit and central.
 - Element 5 could be further strengthened by documenting formal faculty collaboration, a classroom-embedded classical pedagogy model, and teacher-led exemplars in annual reports or on the website. This would align the public narrative with the Six Essential Elements' expectations for faculty as mentors and living curriculum.
 - Element 6 already shows strong parent engagement, but strengthening "Parent Formation" offerings (book groups, regular parent seminars, liturgical/yearly family events) and publicly sharing parent testimonials or case studies would further solidify Element 6 as CLASSICAL.
- Concrete steps:
 - Publish a Faculty Profile page or section detailing teacher qualifications, classical training, and examples of living-curriculum demonstrations in classrooms.
 - Create a public-facing "Faculty as Living Curriculum" feature demonstrating how teachers model virtue, pedagogy, and mastery of classical content in practice.
 - Expand parent-formation programming with recurring book studies, lectures, and home-education partnerships, and publish a faculty-led calendar of these events.
- These needle-mover steps are optional since five of the six categories already land at CLASSICAL, and only Element 5 requires strengthening to reach uniform CLASSICAL consistency. No major re-configuration is required beyond explicit articulation of faculty practices and living-curriculum language. See the Evidence sections above for references to current public materials and opportunities for improvement.

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE DISCLAIMER

This audit was conducted using artificial intelligence tools (including large language models and automated web-analysis scripts) to evaluate the extent to which school websites reflect or incorporate recognized principles of classical education (e.g., the trivium, emphasis on truth/beauty/goodness, integration of great books, Latin/classical languages, Socratic method, rigorous academics, moral/character formation, etc.).

Important Limitations and Caveats

1. Automated Nature: The analysis relies on AI interpretation of publicly-accessible school website content as of the date of the audit. It does not involve direct contact with schools, review of internal documents, classroom observation, or verification of curriculum implementation beyond what is stated or implied on the website.
2. Probabilistic Results: Scores and assessments are probabilistic and reflect the AI's best interpretation of available text and site structure. They are not infallible and may miss nuance, context, or recent changes not yet reflected online.
3. Subjectivity of Classical Education: "Classical Education" encompasses a range of traditions and interpretations (e.g., Dorothy Sayers' trivium model, Classical Christian Education, Great Books programs, etc.). The Humanitas Institute Audit of the Six Elements of Classical Education uses a broad, consensus-based framework derived from prominent classical education organizations and thought leaders. Reasonable people may disagree on weighting or inclusion of specific criteria.
4. No Official Endorsement or Certification: Results do not constitute official endorsement, accreditation, or certification by any classical education organization. They are provided for informational and research purposes only.
5. Potential for Error: Websites may be incomplete, poorly worded, or temporarily inaccurate. Conversely, sophisticated marketing language may create false positives. Human review by parents, educators, or classical education experts is strongly recommended before drawing final conclusions about any school.
6. Data Privacy and Ethics: Only publicly available information was analyzed. No attempts were made to access password-protected areas or collect personal data.
7. No Liability: The authors, developers, and distributors of this audit assume no liability for decisions made on the basis of these results. Users are solely responsible for their own due diligence.

By reading or using this document, you acknowledge and accept the limitations described above.
