Artificial Intelligence Disclaimer

This audit was performed using artificial intelligence tools to evaluate the presence and strength of classical education principles on school websites. Results are automated, probabilistic in nature, and should be considered indicative rather than definitive. See the full disclaimer in the Appendix more details.

SCL MEMBER

Any school that belongs to the Society for Classical Learning (SCL) is, by definition, recognized as a classical school because SCL requires adherence to the six essential elements defined by the Humanitas Institute. However, a school's website may not clearly reflect its conformity to one or more elements. In such cases, the school may still receive a "Somewhat Classical" rating for those elements. Schools can update their website content at any time to achieve a "Classical" rating for a given element.

Overall Classification: CLASSICAL

Executive Summary

Acts Community School TX 77536 appears to be a church-aligned educational initiative rather than a classical school in the strict sense. Public material from the Acts Community Church-side crawl emphasizes theology, gospel formation, and church life (mission to Reach/Train/Send, faith in Jesus, grace, God, etc.), rather than the standard classical curriculum components (grammar, logic, rhetoric; Great Books; liberal arts canon; Socratic pedagogy; Great Conversation). Consequently, the overall assessment is NOT CLASSICAL, with some indicators that align to a religious formation model rather than a full classical program. This divergence is most evident in Curriculum and Pedagogy, where explicit Great Books, Trivium/Quadrivium, or Socratic pedagogy are not evident in the publicly cited materials. The site does show a clear religious/theological orientation and community emphasis, which touches Element 1 (Religious and Metaphysical Foundations) and Element 6 (Parents & Community) in a limited way, but does not robustly meet the six classical elements across all six categories.

Key evidentiary notes:

- The site presents a strong theological orientation (Jesus, faith, grace, God, church) and mission framing (Reach/Train/Send), with explicit statements about following Jesus and modeling His life. This is cited in mission statements and church messaging.
- Public materials lack explicit references to classical curriculum components (grammar, logic, rhetoric; Great Books; Great Conversation; scholé; Socratic seminars; Great Books canon). The absence of these explicit elements supports a NOT CLASSICAL designation for Curriculum and Pedagogy. See the cited church materials for the religious framing, rather than classical pedagogy content.
- The public-facing materials highlight a multi-generational, multi-ethnic, church-community focus, which touches community/community-formation language but does not demonstrate a structured classical parent partnership or formal "living curriculum" framing.

Bottom line: NOT CLASSICAL overall, with Element 1 and Element 2 showing partial alignment to a religious formation mindset, and Categories 3–5 not meeting classical criteria as evidenced by the available public materials.

Executive Summary — Element-by-Element Snapshot

Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

Evidence

- The site presents a clearly theological orientation: mission statements speak of Jesus, faith, grace, and God; verses about the household of God appear in the public content. Example phrases include "Our mission is to Reach people for Jesus, Train people to follow Jesus, and Send people out to make much of Jesus,” and “We proclaim Christ... grace found only through faith in Jesus,” plus admonitions to follow Jesus and be part of a multi-generational church community.

- Additional language emphasizes a Christian worldview and ecclesial community life (Church Center materials, Sermons, Beliefs, Core Values).

Positive/Negative keyword analysis

- Positive indicators from classical lexicons include theology, liturgy, reverence, and sacred practice. The church content clearly foregrounds theology and sacred community life (God, Jesus, faith, grace), which align with the Positive Keywords cluster around Theology and liturgical/community life. Estimated positive keyword presence: moderate (2–3 discrete theological concepts such as Jesus, faith, grace, God). Negative keywords (secular ethical frameworks, relativism) are not evident in the public materials. Estimated negative keyword presence: 0–1.
- Based on the classical rubric, the presence of robust religious/theological framing places this category as SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL (it exhibits theological grounding but lacks explicit classical curriculum/techniques such as Great Books, liturgical curriculum, or scholé pedagogy). The Positive/Negative keyword balance supports a partial rather than full Classical reading.

Why this rating

- The materials are demonstrably theologically centered and church-life oriented, which is consistent with Grounded in Theology and Liturgical/Communal Practices. However, they do not clearly demonstrate the full transcendental moral realism language (truth/beauty/goodness as real and knowable) or liturgical/cultural practices in the classical sense, nor do they show explicit Great Books or classical canon pedagogy. This yields a CLASSIFICATION of SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL for Element 1 rather than fully Classical.

Cited evidence and lexical anchors: the mission statements and theological framing appear in the Acts Community Church materials (publicly accessible) and in the mission/vision excerpts.

Element 2: School Purpose and Goal — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

Evidence

- The public materials emphasize formation of discipleship in a Christian context (reach/train/send; follow Jesus). This signals formation of character and virtue within a religious frame, rather than a vocationally oriented aim or purely information transfer. Quotes include “to follow Jesus” and “grace found only through faith in Jesus.”

Positive/Negative keyword analysis

- Positive keywords aligned with the classical lexicon’s “Formation, not information; virtue; telos; moral imagination” are present in spirit (formation of character through faith and discipleship). However, there is no explicit statement of liberal arts formation, Great Books, or telos toward truth/goodness/beauty in the classical sense; the framework remains within Christian formation rather than paideia as a classical end. Positive keyword presence is moderate; Negative keyword signals (e.g., “workforce preparation,” “career readiness,” secular utilitarian aims) are not evident. Estimated presence: 2–3 positive indicators; 0–1 negative indicators.
- The rubric would place this as SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL because it demonstrates formation and virtue in a religious frame but does not demonstrate the classical liberal-arts telos or the Great Conversation language.

Why this rating

- The formation emphasis is clear, but the aims align with religious discipleship rather than the classical paideia framework (which foregrounds the liberal arts, Great Books, and a different telos). Thus Element 2 earns SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL.

Cited evidence and lexical anchors: mission framing and discipleship language from church materials.

Element 3: School Curriculum — NOT CLASSICAL

Evidence

- There is no explicit evidence of the classical curriculum elements (grammar, logic, rhetoric; Seven Liberal Arts; Great Books; Great Conversation; Latin/Greek; history as Western civilization; scholé/restful learning; or canonical engagement). The public materials emphasize faith formation, church life, and discipleship rather than a classical curriculum framework.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis

- Positive classical-curriculum keywords (grammar/logic/rhetoric, trivium/quadrivium, Great Books, Great Conversation, memorization/chanting, Latin/Greek, history canon) do not appear in the public curriculum materials. Negative signals for curriculum surrogates (social studies framing replacing history, project-based learning dominance) are not present in the public materials either, but absence of classical keywords is decisive. Estimated positive keywords: 0–1; Negative keywords: 0.
- The absence of classical curriculum language supports a NOT CLASSICAL designation for Curriculum.

Why this rating

- The public content is religious formation oriented and does not demonstrate liberal-arts curriculum content (grammar, logic, rhetoric; Great Books; Great Conversation; Latin/Greek; set texts). Therefore Element 3 is NOT CLASSICAL.

Cited evidence and lexical anchors: publicly visible mission/faith framing lines (no Great Books/trivium references found in the cited content).

Element 4: School Pedagogy or Teaching Methods — NOT CLASSICAL

Evidence

- The materials do not demonstrate classical pedagogy (Socratic dialogue, scholé/restful learning, memorization/chanting, imitation of models, etc.). The public-facing content illustrates church-centered formation rather than a classical pedagogy. No explicit Socratic seminars, Paideia, or chant-based memory work is evidenced in the cited materials.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis

- Positive pedagogical keywords from classical sources (Socratic dialogue, lectio divina as contemplative reading, scholé/restful learning, memorization/recitation, master-apprentice imitation) are not evidenced in the public content. Negative signals (e.g., purely experiential or project-based approaches) are not necessarily shown, but absence of classical pedagogical language results in a NOT CLASSICAL designation for Pedagogy.
- Estimated positive: 0–1; negative: 0.

Why this rating

- Absence of explicit classical pedagogy signals (Socratic seminars, scholé, liturgical/memory work pedagogy) leads to NOT CLASSICAL for Pedagogy.

Cited evidence and lexical anchors: lack of classical pedagogy references in the public-facing materials (discipleship language dominates).

Element 5: School Faculty — NOT CLASSICAL

Evidence

- The public materials do not describe faculty as “living curriculum,” mentors, or colleagues in a classical sense. There is no evidence in the cited content of a classical faculty profile (teacher as mentor, virtuous exemplars, master teacher model, etc.). The content is church formation oriented rather than classical faculty framing.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis

- Positive keywords in the classical lexicon for Faculty include “model teachers and mentors,” “living curriculum,” “faculty as friends,” “portrait of a teacher,” etc. Those are not evidenced in the school’s public materials. Estimated positive: 0–1; Negative: 0.

Why this rating

- Without explicit “living curriculum” or “master-teacher” language in the public materials, Element 5 is NOT CLASSICAL.

Cited evidence and lexical anchors: classical lexicon sections describing the living curriculum and faculty roles; not reflected in the public materials.

Element 6: Parents & Community — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

Evidence

- The site communicates a church–community orientation (multi–generational, multi–cultural) and a sense of community life. The public materials emphasize a church–centered community rather than a formal partnership with families as co–educators or formal parent formation. However, the inclusion of “multi-generational” community captures a community-building dimension that resembles the more favorable end of the classical spectrum (family/community involvement and shared culture), albeit not in the full “parents as co–educators” sense.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis

- Positive keywords relevant to Parents & Community in classical terms include “partnership with families,” “parent formation,” “open campus,” and “parent involvement.” The church materials reflect community, though not explicit co–educator partnerships or formal parent–education programs. Positive indicators: presence of a family/community focus; Negative indicators: lack of explicit parent–teacher co–education model.
- Estimated positive: 1–2 (community/family–style language); Negative: 0–1 (no explicit parent-education programs). Overall: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL.

Why this rating

- The materials show a strong community orientation and multi–generational framing, which aligns with some aspects of the classical emphasis on families and community, but they do not demonstrate a formal classical parent partnership or explicit parent-education programs. Therefore Element 6 is SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL.

Cited evidence and lexical anchors: multi–generational language and community framing in church materials.

Aggregate assessment (Category synthesis)

- Element 1: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL
- Element 2: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL
- Element 3: NOT CLASSICAL
- Element 4: NOT CLASSICAL
- Element 5: NOT CLASSICAL
- Element 6: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

Overall ranking: NOT CLASSICAL.

Rationale: The school’s public materials strongly emphasize religious formation and church life, with explicit discipleship language and gospel framing, but they do not demonstrate the core classical curriculum, pedagogical methods, or liberal arts canon that define classical education per the Six Essential Elements rubric.

The mix of SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL signals (religious/theological grounding and some community/formation language) without the decisive classical curriculum and pedagogy places Acts Community School TX 77536 outside the classical model in aggregate.

What Would Move the Needle (only applicable to SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL cases)

- Not applicable here, as the aggregate classification is NOT CLASSICAL. If future public materials were to be added, concrete needle-moving changes would include:
- Introduce a classical core: grammar, logic, rhetoric; Great Books; and primary sources standard within the curriculum.
- Integrate liberal arts pedagogy: Socratic seminars; Paideia-style recitation; restfulness (scholé) as part of daily rhythms.
- Establish a formal “living curriculum” with teacher as mentor and model of virtue.
- Create a robust parent partnership program (parents as co-teachers; ongoing parent formation).
- Document explicit Great Books engagement and Western canon in the published materials.

ABSTRACT

Acts Community School TX 77536 presents a public profile dominated by church-centered theology and discipleship rather than classical liberal arts education. Category-by-category keyword analysis shows:

- Element 1 (Religious and Metaphysical Foundations): SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL, driven by explicit theological framing and ecclesial community language in public materials.
- Element 2 (School Purpose and Goal): SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL, given formation and discipleship orientation, but without explicit classical telos toward truth/goodness/beauty as defined by classical criteria.
- Element 3 (Curriculum): NOT CLASSICAL, lacking explicit grammar/logical/rhetoric or Great Books elements.
- Element 4 (Pedagogy): NOT CLASSICAL, no evidence of Socratic/Scholé/recitation pedagogy in public materials.
- Element 5 (Faculty): NOT CLASSICAL, no living-curriculum or master-teacher framing visible in public materials.
- Element 6 (Parents & Community): SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL, due to a broader community orientation, though lacking explicit parent-as-co-educators programs.

Aggregate rating: NOT CLASSICAL.

This assessment draws on classical education criteria from the Six Essential Elements of a Classical School (1) rubric and lexicon (presence/absence of terms like “grammar, logic, rhetoric,” “Great Books,” “Scholé,” “Socratic dialogue,” “theology,” “liturgy,” “virtue,” etc.), cross-referenced with the school’s public materials (mission statements, beliefs, and community language). The Six Elements materials provide explicit positive/negative keyword indicators, including references to theology, liturgy, great books, Great Conversation, formation, and partnership with families; these are used to interpret the Acts Community School TX 77536 public content and categorize each category. See the Six Essential Elements documents for the positive and negative keyword indicators used in this analysis, including relational emphasis on partnership with families, formation, and liturgical practices as well as the lexicon of classical terms.

Notes on sources used

- Foundational classical elements and keyword lexicon: Six Essential Elements of a Classical School (1) (positive/negative keyword indicators; categorization criteria).
- Additional classical lexicon mapping for the six elements (religious/metaphysical foundations, etc.).
- School-specific crawl content (Acts Community Church/Acts Community School) providing mission statements and theological framing (evidence for religious foundations and community formation).
- Public site listing and home-page references (Sermons, Beliefs, Core Values; service times; Deer Park TX address).

ABSTRACT

This evaluation classifies Acts Community School TX 77536 as NOT CLASSICAL, based on the absence of explicit classical curriculum elements (grammar, logic, rhetoric; Great Books; Great Conversation; scholé pedagogy) in the public materials and the presence of strong religious/theological framing (mission to reach/-train/send; following Jesus; grace; God). Category-wise, Religious and Metaphysical Foundations and School Purpose/Goal show SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL alignment (theological formation and discipleship framing), whereas Curriculum, Pedagogy, and Faculty are NOT CLASSICAL due to lack of classical content and teaching methods in the public materials. Parents & Community show SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL potential due to a multi-generational community emphasis, but without explicit parent-educator partnerships. The aggregate rating remains NOT CLASSICAL, with a note that if future public materials incorporate explicit classical curriculum and pedagogical elements, the school could shift toward SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL or CLASSICAL.

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE DISCLAIMER

This audit was conducted using artificial intelligence tools (including large language models and automated web-analysis scripts) to evaluate the extent to which school websites reflect or incorporate recognized principles of classical education (e.g., the trivium, emphasis on truth/beauty/goodness, integration of great books, Latin/classical languages, Socratic method, rigorous academics, moral/character formation, etc.).

Important Limitations and Caveats

1. Automated Nature: The analysis relies on AI interpretation of publicly-accessible school website content as of the date of the audit. It does not involve direct contact with schools, review of internal documents, classroom observation, or verification of curriculum implementation beyond what is stated or implied on the website.
2. Probabilistic Results: Scores and assessments are probabilistic and reflect the AI's best interpretation of available text and site structure. They are not infallible and may miss nuance, context, or recent changes not yet reflected online.
3. Subjectivity of Classical Education: "Classical Education" encompasses a range of traditions and interpretations (e.g., Dorothy Sayers' trivium model, Classical Christian Education, Great Books programs, etc.). The Humanitas Institute Audit of the Six Elements of Classical Education uses a broad, consensus-based framework derived from prominent classical education organizations and thought leaders. Reasonable people may disagree on weighting or inclusion of specific criteria.
4. No Official Endorsement or Certification: Results do not constitute official endorsement, accreditation, or certification by any classical education organization. They are provided for informational and research purposes only.
5. Potential for Error: Websites may be incomplete, poorly worded, or temporarily inaccurate. Conversely, sophisticated marketing language may create false positives. Human review by parents, educators, or classical education experts is strongly recommended before drawing final conclusions about any school.
6. Data Privacy and Ethics: Only publicly available information was analyzed. No attempts were made to access password-protected areas or collect personal data.
7. No Liability: The authors, developers, and distributors of this audit assume no liability for decisions made on the basis of these results. Users are solely responsible for their own due diligence.

By reading or using this document, you acknowledge and accept the limitations described above.
