

HUMANITAS
INSTITUTE

Six Elements of Classical Education School Website Audit

School: Faith Academy of Freestone
School Website: <https://www.fafreestone.org/>

January 7, 2026

Artificial Intelligence Disclaimer

This audit was performed using artificial intelligence tools to evaluate the presence and strength of classical education principles on school websites. Results are automated, probabilistic in nature, and should be considered indicative rather than definitive. See the full disclaimer in the Appendix more details.

Overall Classification: CLASSICAL

Executive Summary

Faith Academy of Freestone (Freestone, TX 75840) presents a public-facing portrait of a Christ-centered, classical Christian school that emphasizes formation of character and virtue within a family-partnered community. Public materials consistently describe a Christ-centered, biblical worldview-infused approach, a classical framework (grammar, logic, rhetoric), and a pedagogy that foregrounds virtue, reverence, and disciplined study. Evidence from the school's site shows explicit references to Christian faith as foundational, a classical curriculum structure (grammar/logic/rhetoric; with named classical resources), and faculty highlighted as dedicated mentors. The school also stresses parental partnership and open engagement with families, including family letters, admissions processes, and community-facing communications. Taken together, these elements align Faith Academy with a CLASSICAL orientation, with relatively strong emphasis across most six classical criteria, and fewer explicit signals of non-classical rhetoric or practices.

- Overall classification: CLASSICAL
- Category-by-category snapshot (highlights):
- Religious and Metaphysical Foundations: CLASSICAL — explicit Christ-centered, biblical framing and prayerful language appear across site content; some elements of liturgical/community practices are not deeply foregrounded but the theological framing is clear.
- Purpose and Goal: CLASSICAL — emphasis on formation of virtue, wisdom, and character alongside Christian formation; appeals to enduring truths rather than vocationalism.
- Curriculum: CLASSICAL — explicit grammar, logic, rhetoric references; classical-curriculum orientation with named classical resources; limited explicit Great Books mention but core trivium emphasis is strong.
- Pedagogy: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL — explicit rhetoric focus and a classical teacher identity present; explicit Socratic/seminar-based pedagogy is not clearly described, though upper-school rhetoric and classical training are evident.
- Faculty: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL — dedicated teachers and mentors; “classical rhetoric and humane letters” teacher highlighted; explicit “living curriculum” language is not overtly shown, but the faculty is framed as virtuous and competent.
- Parents & Community: CLASSICAL — strong emphasis on partnership with families, parental involvement, and open access to the school; multiple signals of family engagement and community-minded governance.
- What would move the needle (if/when relevant): Not applicable here since the school is classified as CLASSICAL. No major, category-shifting needle moves are required based on available public materials.
- Abstract: Faith Academy of Freestone exhibits core classical markers in its public materials—a Christ-centered mission, formation-focused purpose, and a grammar-logic-rhetoric curricular core—anchored by a clear parental-partnered community ethos. The weight of evidence supports CLASSICAL classification with some categories reaching “Somewhat Classical” in pedagogy and faculty signals; the aggregate stance remains CLASSICAL.

Executive Summary — Element-by-Element Snapshot

Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The school describes itself as “Christ-centered” and as providing a “Classical Christian education” that nurtures the mind, body, and spirit. This framing appears repeatedly across site content, including about pages and mission statements. Example: “Faith Academy of Freestone is partnering with parents to provide a Christ-centered, Classical Christian education that nurtures the mind, body, and spirit.”
- Public materials emphasize biblical principles and a faith-centric worldview, including explicit references to Christ and biblical truth in admissions and mission language.
- The curriculum page frames education in terms of a Christian formation (e.g., “A School Committed to Christ” with language about belonging to the Lord).
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive: Christ-centered, biblical principles, gospel/bible references, Christian faith, prayerful language, theology (indirectly through scripture-centric framing).
- Negative: No explicit signals of secular ethics, relativism, or values-clarification language; absence of overt secular metaphysical frameworks.
- Frequency/richness: Several explicit phrases indicating a religious-metaphysical foundation; explicit liturgical/prayer language is less foregrounded but the theological framing is strong.
- Why this rating
- The school’s public materials center Christian faith as foundational to education and link Virtue/ Wisdom with biblical truth. This aligns with the Positive Keywords around theology, sacred tradition, and reverence in the classical lexicon. The presence of Christ-centered language and biblical framing indicates a robust religious/metaphysical orientation, supporting CLASSICAL rather than NOT CLASSICAL.

Citations: Christ-centered and biblical framing are evident in the About and Mission materials; the public-facing statements emphasize formation through biblical faith (e.g., “Christ-centered, Classical Christian education”).

Element 2: School Purpose and Goal — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- Public statements emphasize formation of virtue, wisdom, and character through a classical Christian lens rather than mere information or career-focused aims. Phrases such as “academic excellence, spiritual formation, and moral character are inseparable” and “formation rather than information” appear in governance and mission materials.
- The mission statement and branding emphasize virtue, wisdom, and human flourishing within a classical framework, rather than job-readiness alone. The expanded business/mission literature frames the aim as “classical discipleship of children,” “virtue and wisdom,” and a biblical worldview.
- The school’s public communications highlight paired aims of faith and learning, with a focus on formation and character alongside academic rigor.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive: formation, virtue, wisdom, moral character, human flourishing, liberal education/paideia, contemplation, great conversation.

- Negative: potential signals of job-readiness or college/workforce focus are absent; no strong emphasis on workforce prep as primary goal.
- Frequency/richness: Multiple explicit references to formation, virtue, wisdom, and moral aims; textual signals about continuing classical formation without reducing to career prep.
- Why this rating
- The school foregrounds formation and virtue as central aims, rather than simply preparing students for work. The language maps onto the Positive keywords for Purpose and Goal in the classical rubric (formation of virtue, pursuit of true/good/beautiful; human flourishing). This justifies CLASSICAL.

Citations: Mission statements and formation-focused language are present in the About/Mission and curricular materials.

Element 3: School Curriculum — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The curriculum is described in terms of the liberal arts framework with grammar, logic, and rhetoric explicitly named (e.g., “A Glance into Classical Education” lists Wisdom, Virtue, Rhetoric, Logic). The program explicitly names Grammar School (K–4) and Logic & Rhetoric (5–11).
- The school identifies classical resources and approaches (Memoria Press, Veritas Press, IEW, Saxon Math, Gospel Story Bible; Summit Ministries; Omnibus) as part of core curriculum, indicating a classical Christian curricular orientation.
- The site highlights a commitment to “classical discipleship” and “classical education” as the model, reinforcing the strategic curricular orientation.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive: grammar, logic, rhetoric; great books/great conversation not always explicit but implied through classical program choices; Memoria Press/Veritas Press/Summit Omnibus emphasis; study of Western heritage via a classical lens.
- Negative: explicit Great Books or “Great Conversation” language is not consistently visible in all pages; the explicit Great Books canonical emphasis is not always spelled out in every public page.
- Frequency/richness: Clear presence of grammar/logic/rhetoric; named classical programs; some mention of Great Books is not as overt, but core classical components are well represented.
- Why this rating
- The explicit reference to grammar/logic/rhetoric and use of classical curricula resources point to CLASSICAL. While Great Books is not always foregrounded, the core trivium emphasis and classical materials strongly support a CLASSICAL rating.

Citations: Curriculum pages showing grammar/logic/rhetoric; named classical curricula resources; “A Glance into Classical Education” framing.

Element 4: School Pedagogy or Teaching Methods — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- There is explicit mention of a classical rhetorical focus in the faculty, including a named “Classical Rhetoric and Humane Letters” teacher (Marsha Black). This demonstrates a clear institutional investment in rhetoric and classical pedagogy in at least one faculty role.
- The curriculum and program descriptions emphasize a classical framework (grammar/logic/rhetoric) and a mission that centers formation, but the public materials do not consistently describe the full range of classical pedagogical methods (e.g., Socratic seminars, chant/sing/song memory, or extensive “Scholé” style contemplative days) in detail across all grade levels.

- Some emphasis on “memory work” or chanting is not clearly evidenced in the public site content, though one might infer classical pedagogy given the presence of rhetoric-focused instruction and the classical teacher profile.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive: rhetoric training, humane letters, classical pedagogy signals; Socratic/seminar language is not consistently evidenced, but there is a strong rhetoric/logic curriculum presence.
- Negative: explicit frequent references to Socratic seminars, discipleship-based seminar pedagogy, or systematic “Scholé” contemplation days are not clearly documented across the site.
- Frequency/richness: Moderate; robust evidence for rhetoric-focused instruction and classical curriculum; weaker explicit documentation of full Socratic/seminar-based pedagogy across grade bands.
- Why this rating
- The presence of a named classical rhetoric teacher and a grammar/logic/rhetoric curriculum supports CLASSICAL orientation, but the absence of detailed, site-wide articulation of full Socratic pedagogy or the full range of contemplative practices across grades makes the category fall toward SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL rather than firmly CLASSICAL.

Citations: Marsha Black as Classical Rhetoric teacher; explicit mention of classical curriculum; general framing of formation and classical education.

Element 5: School Faculty — SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The site highlights dedicated and faithful teachers who are described as educators who mentor and guide students. For example, “Dedicated & Faithful Teachers” and “Educators who are passionate about teaching and mentoring.”
- Leadership pages identify named faculty roles (Head of School, Dean of Academics, Athletic Director) and a visible board of directors; one faculty member is explicitly described as a “Classical Rhetoric and Humane Letters Teacher,” signaling a classical faculty profile.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive: model teachers and mentors, living curriculum (conceptually), classical rhetoric/humane letters teacher; teacher as guides/mentors; portrait of teacher expectations.
- Negative: explicit statements about a “living curriculum” or a “portrait of a teacher” are not frequently seen in the public materials; while there is a strong faculty orientation, the site does not consistently foreground a fully developed “faculty as living curriculum” language across all communications.
- Frequency/richness: Moderate, with clear signals of a strong, dedicated faculty and one explicit classical role; broader “living-curriculum” language is not consistently shown.
- Why this rating
- The presence of dedicated, mission-aligned teachers and a named classical-rhetoric teacher supports a CLASSICAL leaning, but the public materials do not provide a fully cohesive, widely pervasive depiction of a complete “living curriculum” faculty framework across all years. This justifies SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL.

Citations: Dedicated teachers; named classical rhetoric teacher; leadership and faculty signals.

Element 6: Parents & Community — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The school presents strong partnership language with parents, describing itself as “partnering with parents” to provide a Christ-centered, Classical Christian education and inviting parental involvement.
- Public communications emphasize family engagement, visits, and co-teaching roles; there are family letters and enrollment communications that invite participation and collaboration (e.g., “Join Our Family,” school letters, family enrollment communications).
- The school materials include explicit resources for families (family letters, enrollment information, governance communications) and emphasize parent formation and engagement. The expanded business/marketing plan describes parent engagement and shared mission.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive: partnership with families, parental engagement, open campus/visits, family letters, parent formation, classical book clubs (referenced in the lexicon; not always explicit, but the site signals active parent involvement).
- Negative: no explicit negative signals; none evident in the public materials.
- Frequency/richness: Numerous explicit signals of family partnership, parent engagement, and welcoming campus access.
- Why this rating
- The school clearly foregrounds parental partnership and family engagement, aligning with CLASSICAL expectations for parents as co-teachers and engaged participants in the educational project.

Citations: Public statements about partnering with parents; family letters; “Join Our Family”; admissions communications; governance materials.

Aggregate Ranking

- Element 1: CLASSICAL
- Element 2: CLASSICAL
- Element 3: CLASSICAL
- Element 4: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL
- Element 5: SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL
- Element 6: CLASSICAL

Overall: CLASSICAL

Rationale for aggregate: Four of the six categories meet CLASSICAL, with Pedagogy and Faculty showing more nuanced signals that tilt toward SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL due to less explicit detailing of full classical pedagogy and a fully-developed living-curriculum portrayal. Parents & Community and Curriculum, along with Religious Foundations and Purpose/Goal, robustly meet the CLASSICAL criteria. The aggregate assessment therefore lands at CLASSICAL.

What would move the needle

- If the school seeks to move from SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL toward CLASSICAL in Pedagogy:
- Provide explicit public documentation of Socratic seminars or Paideia-style discussions across upper grades, with sample lesson narratives or testimonials.
- Articulate a comprehensive, school-wide picture of the “living curriculum” in faculty language, including explicit faculty development in classical methods and a consistent pedagogy across grade bands.
- If the school seeks to further strengthen Faculty signaling:
- Publish a formal “Portrait of a Classical Teacher” and “Portrait of a Student” with characteristics aligned to classical virtues, and provide examples of mentorship, memory-work, and living-books engagement across grade bands.

- If the school seeks to deepen Curriculum signaling:
- Provide explicit references to Great Books or canonical primary sources in public materials, with examples of cross-curricular Great Conversation activities, and lay out a formal plan for integrating core Great Books selections within the K–12 range.
- If the school seeks to broaden Parents & Community signaling:
- Create regular, formal parent-education programming (book studies, lectures) with schedules and past topics visible on the site, and clearly document opportunities for parent involvement as co-educators in daily life and liturgical or shared-ritual activities.

Appendix

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE DISCLAIMER

This audit was conducted using artificial intelligence tools (including large language models and automated web-analysis scripts) to evaluate the extent to which school websites reflect or incorporate recognized principles of classical education (e.g., the trivium, emphasis on truth/beauty/goodness, integration of great books, Latin/classical languages, Socratic method, rigorous academics, moral/character formation, etc.).

Important Limitations and Caveats

1. Automated Nature: The analysis relies on AI interpretation of publicly-accessible school website content as of the date of the audit. It does not involve direct contact with schools, review of internal documents, classroom observation, or verification of curriculum implementation beyond what is stated or implied on the website.
2. Probabilistic Results: Scores and assessments are probabilistic and reflect the AI's best interpretation of available text and site structure. They are not infallible and may miss nuance, context, or recent changes not yet reflected online.
3. Subjectivity of Classical Education: "Classical Education" encompasses a range of traditions and interpretations (e.g., Dorothy Sayers' trivium model, Classical Christian Education, Great Books programs, etc.). The Humanitas Institute Audit of the Six Elements of Classical Education uses a broad, consensus-based framework derived from prominent classical education organizations and thought leaders. Reasonable people may disagree on weighting or inclusion of specific criteria.
4. No Official Endorsement or Certification: Results do not constitute official endorsement, accreditation, or certification by any classical education organization. They are provided for informational and research purposes only.
5. Potential for Error: Websites may be incomplete, poorly worded, or temporarily inaccurate. Conversely, sophisticated marketing language may create false positives. Human review by parents, educators, or classical education experts is strongly recommended before drawing final conclusions about any school.
6. Data Privacy and Ethics: Only publicly available information was analyzed. No attempts were made to access password-protected areas or collect personal data.
7. No Liability: The authors, developers, and distributors of this audit assume no liability for decisions made on the basis of these results. Users are solely responsible for their own due diligence.

By reading or using this document, you acknowledge and accept the limitations described above.