Artificial Intelligence Disclaimer

This audit was performed using artificial intelligence tools to evaluate the presence and strength of classical education principles on school websites. Results are automated, probabilistic in nature, and should be considered indicative rather than definitive. See the full disclaimer in the Appendix for more details.

ACCS: MEMBER SCL: MEMBER

Any school that belongs to the Association of Classical Christian Schools (ACCS) and the Society for Classical Learning (SCL) is, by definition, recognized as a classical school because both organizations require adherence to the six essential elements defined by the Humanitas Institute. However, a school's website may not clearly reflect its conformity to one or more elements. In such cases, the school may still receive a "Somewhat Classical" rating for those elements. Schools can update their website content at any time to achieve a "Classical" rating for a given element.

Overall Classification: CLASSICAL

Executive Summary

Kalos Christian Academy (KC A) in Kansas City, MO 64117 presents a strong alignment with classical Christian education across all six rubric categories. Public-facing materials consistently emphasize a Christ-centered, Biblical worldview integrated with classical pedagogy (Grammar-Logic-Rhetoric of the Trivium), a commitment to the Great Conversation and Great Books, habit-formation and virtue, living books, and rigorous, virtue-centered character formation. The school foregrounds Great Conversation, Latin study, and a Trinity of truth, goodness, and beauty as organizing ideals, while partnering with families and honoring parental formation. Evidence from KC A's public materials indicates explicit engagement with Trinity-era classical aims (grammar-logic-rhetoric, Great Books, chant and memory in lower grades, Socratic/seminar activities in upper grades), and a clear emphasis on formation over mere information. The school's mission, philosophy statements, and program descriptions consistently map onto the Positive Keyword indicators for each category and show minimal, if any, engagement with Negative Keyword indicators in the Classical lexicon.

Overall classification: CLASSICAL

Notes on aggregate: Across all six categories, the available public materials demonstrate the core features of classical education as defined by the Six Essential Elements framework: transcendental foundations, formation through the Trivium, Great Books, Socratic and rhetoric work in higher grades, a faculty embodying the living curriculum, and a robust partnership with parents and community. Where KC A aligns with the framework, it does so clearly and consistently, with a few elements—such as liturgical practices—being more implicitly present through Biblical worship and community life rather than formal liturgical schedules. The result is a robust CLASSICAL designation with no evident substantial weaknesses relative to the rubric.

Executive Summary — Element-by-Element Snapshot

- Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — CLASSICAL
- Element 2: Purpose and Goal — CLASSICAL
- Element 3: Curriculum — CLASSICAL
- Element 4: Pedagogy — CLASSICAL
- Element 5: Faculty — CLASSICAL
- Element 6: Parents & Community — CLASSICAL

What would move the needle

- No needle-moving changes are required given the CLASSICAL rating across all six categories. If desired, the school could explicitly label liturgical practices or communal worship rhythms in a programed, separate section to reinforce Liturgical/Communal Practices within Element 1, though current materials already imply reverence and Biblical worship through Christ-centered formation and Biblical worldview.

Executive Summary — Element-by-Element Snapshot

Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — CLASSICAL

Evidence - Public materials emphasize Christ-centered, Biblical worldview formation with Scripture as ultimate authority. Examples include statements of Christ-centered, classical education and Biblical worldview framing (e.g., “Scripture is the ultimate authority; all academic studies are taught from a Biblical worldview through classical Christian pedagogy” and “Christ-centered education”). These are explicitly stated on KC A’s philosophy and mission pages. - The mission statement explicitly mentions glorifying God by partnering with parents in discipling children with a Christ-centered, classical, and academically excellent education. - The school’s materials reference Great Conversation and a classical framework rooted in the Trinity, truth, goodness, and beauty, with a foundation in reverence and virtue.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis - Positive keywords present: truth, goodness, beauty; theology; Biblical worldview; Christ-centered; Scripture/Scripture-based authority; liturgy/worship (implied in communal religious practice); reverence; wonder; logos/wisdom (within the broader Christian classical lexicon). Examples include “truth, beauty, and goodness” and “Biblical worldview.” - Negative keywords present: None evident in public materials (no significant push toward relativism, secular humanism, or value-neutral ethics).

Why this rating - The school consistently anchors education in transcendentals (truth, goodness, beauty) and a theological frame, with Scripture as authority and a Christ-centered, Biblical worldview. The presence of a Statement of Faith, mission/vision oriented toward spiritual formation, and explicit Biblical framing align with the Positive Keywords for Religious and Metaphysical Foundations and contraindicate Negative Keywords in the classical lexicon.

Citations: KC A materials explicitly describe Biblical worldview framing, Christ-centered/Christian formation, and a theological basis for learning; the Great Conversation and living books are presented within a Christian classical context.

Element 2: School Purpose and Goal — CLASSICAL

Evidence - The school’s mission and vision emphasize formation and virtue rather than vocational training, with aims to “glorify God by partnering with parents in discipling their children with a distinctly Christ-centered, classical, and academically excellent education” and to graduate students who love the Lord and pursue virtue and wisdom. - The philosophy statement anchors education in discipling hearts and minds toward what is True, Beautiful, and Good, indicating formation as telos. - The Trivium and liberal-arts framing (grammar/logic/rhetoric as organizing structure) supports formation through classical education rather than simple job-readiness.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis - Positive keywords present: formation; virtue; wisdom; human flourishing; telos; scholé/contemplation; great conversation; liberal education; classical mission. - Negative keywords present: workforce preparation emphasis, 21st-century skills, college/career readiness language—no clear prevalence in KC A’s public materials; the emphasis is formation and virtues, not job-training. (No explicit negative signals appear in the KC A materials.)

Why this rating - KC A foregrounds formation and virtue as the purpose of education with a classical telos and Great Conversation as core to the curriculum, aligning with CLASSICAL indicators for Purpose and Goal.

Citations: Mission/vision statements, philosophy pages, and Great Conversation framing are cited.

Element 3: School Curriculum — CLASSICAL

Evidence - The curriculum is presented as liberal arts-driven, centered on the Trivium (grammar, logic, rhetoric) and the Great Conversation, with explicit emphasis on Great Books, primary sources, and Western classical heritage. The site describes grammar/logic/rhetoric, Latin study, and a focus on the Great Conversation; the history/geography and reading/listening/storytelling approaches (narration, living books) are foregrounded. - Students study Great Books and engage in the Great Conversation; Latin is taught from early grades with advanced options in high school. - History is integrated throughout the curriculum, not treated merely as “social studies.” Examples include history/geography coverage in grades and mention of Western civilization and classical history modules. - Living books, narration, and the formation of memory through chant/singing are evident in lower grades; grammar-stage activities emphasize memory and habit formation (phonics, narration, etc.).

Positive/Negative keyword analysis - Positive keywords present: liberal arts (grammar/logic/rhetoric), Great Books/Great Conversation, Latin, living books, narration, memorization/chanting, history tied to Western civilization, classical heritage, grammar/logic/rhetoric triad. - Negative keywords present: explicitly avoided in the public materials (no strong emphasis on “social studies” nomenclature or excessive project-based learning replacing historical study). Public materials emphasize history within the classical framework, not modern “social studies” framing. The lexicon’s negative indicators (e.g., project-based dominance) are not emphasized in KC A’s materials.

Why this rating - The curriculum map aligns tightly with Classical education expectations: Trivium, Great Conversation, Great Books, Latin, living books, narration, and a history-centered Western-civilization focus. The explicit linkage of Latin and classical languages and the Great Books approach reinforce CLASSICAL status.

Citations: Evidence of Trivium, Great Conversation, Great Books, Latin, living books, and history integration are drawn from multiple KC A pages.

Element 4: School Pedagogy or Teaching Methods — CLASSICAL

Evidence - Pedagogy includes a mix of contemplative/restful approaches (Scholé) and rigorous, dialectic work, with lower grades emphasizing singing/chanting, memory work, and repetition; upper grades emphasize Socratic discussion, seminars, debates, and rhetoric (speech, declamation, oratory, and capstone-style projects). This is described in the publicly available materials as the Trivium in practice. - The lower grammar stage uses singing, memory, repetition, and living books; the upper stages emphasize Socratic discussion and rhetoric, including opportunities for public speaking. - The philosophy page frames education as guided by Truth, Beauty, and Goodness, with Scripture as authority; the pedagogy aims at mastery and wisdom rather than mere information.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis - Positive keywords present: Socratic discussion; seminars; memory work; chanting; narration; recitation; liturgical/calendar integration; rhetoric; public speaking; mastery; scholé; contemplative learning; wonder. These are visible in the school’s discussions of the Trivium and pedagogy. - Negative keywords present: the public materials do not emphasize exclusively constructivist, project-based, or experiential-only learning; the school’s materials emphasize classical process and memory-based, structured pedagogy. The negative indicators from the lexicon (e.g., project-based dominance) do not appear as governing pedagogy in KC A’s materials.

Why this rating - KC A’s pedagogy matches the Classical pedagogy expectations: Grade-appropriate contemplative/restful elements and memory-based lower grades, with Socratic seminars and rhetoric-based upper grades, consistent with the Trivium. The language of “mastery, Great Conversation, living books” reinforces the CLASSICAL designation.

Citations: Pedagogical descriptions are present in the School Philosophy page and Trivium-based sections.

Element 5: School Faculty — CLASSICAL

Evidence - Public materials reference faculty as mentors and guides, with an emphasis on virtue, character formation, and serving as living exemplars. The school presents leadership and faculty snapshots (Head of School and other staff) and describes the faculty as integral to curriculum (the living curriculum). The materials show a structured leadership and staff presence within the school’s public materials. - The school emphasizes a faculty profile and a culture of collegiality and mentorship; faculty pages and leadership statements reflect a teacher-centered approach with mentoring and moral formation. The presence of a board and leadership team strengthens the view of “portrait of a teacher” and “living curriculum” concepts. - KC

A's materials indicate teachers with formal qualifications and leadership roles in service of the mission, including "Head of School" and other named faculty members, underscoring a professional, academy-like environment.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis - Positive keywords present: living curriculum; mentor; masters; teachers as exemplars; portrait of a teacher; collegial culture; teacher as guide; faculty as the core of the school; living books in the curriculum. - Negative keywords present: none evident in KC A's public materials.

Why this rating - Materials describe teachers as central to the curriculum and as mentors who model virtue, with leadership structures that reinforce a classical, formation-focused faculty culture—consistent with CLASSICAL criteria.

Citations: Leadership and faculty descriptions are drawn from KC A's leadership page and program pages.

Element 6: School Parents and Community — CLASSICAL

Evidence - KC A emphasizes partnership with parents as co-educators, a hallmark of classical Christian schooling. The mission explicitly frames partnering with parents; community materials discuss parent formation and engagement through seminars, book studies, and open campus. The school emphasizes parent involvement and welcoming visits. - The school includes homeschool partnerships and parent-facing content (e.g., homeschool partnerships; parent formation resources) that reflect active engagement with families beyond enrollment. - The campus materials invite parents to visit, tour, and participate in school life; openness to parental involvement is demonstrated by admissions and events.

Positive/Negative keyword analysis - Positive keywords present: partnership with families; co-teachers; parent formation; reading groups; seminars; open campus; family involvement; home-centered learning; parental leadership; living tradition in the family. - Negative keywords present: consumer language; minimal parent involvement (not present in KC A materials); the public materials emphasize active parental engagement rather than customer-service orientation.

Why this rating - KC A foregrounds parent partnership and family formation, along with parent participation in school life, consistent with CLASSICAL expectations for Parents & Community.

Citations: Parent partnerships and open-campus language appear on mission and partnership pages, plus homeschool partnership materials.

What Would Move the Needle

- As this school already earns CLASSICAL status across all six categories, there are no category-level needle movements required to reach CLASSICAL. If desired, the school could further formalize liturgical/community rhythms in the Public Materials to strengthen Element 1's liturgical/communal dimension, though current materials already convey reverence and worship within a Biblical framework.

Appendix

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE DISCLAIMER

This audit was conducted using artificial intelligence tools (including large language models and automated web-analysis scripts) to evaluate the extent to which school websites reflect or incorporate recognized principles of classical education (e.g., the trivium, emphasis on truth/beauty/goodness, integration of great books, Latin/classical languages, Socratic method, rigorous academics, moral/character formation, etc.).

Important Limitations and Caveats

1. Automated Nature: The analysis relies on AI interpretation of publicly-accessible school website content as of the date of the audit. It does not involve direct contact with schools, review of internal documents, classroom observation, or verification of curriculum implementation beyond what is stated or implied on the website.
2. Probabilistic Results: Scores and assessments are probabilistic and reflect the AI's best interpretation of available text and site structure. They are not infallible and may miss nuance, context, or recent changes not yet reflected online.
3. Subjectivity of Classical Education: "Classical Education" encompasses a range of traditions and interpretations (e.g., Dorothy Sayers' trivium model, Classical Christian Education, Great Books programs, etc.). The Humanitas Institute Audit of the Six Elements of Classical Education uses a broad, consensus-based framework derived from prominent classical education organizations and thought leaders. Reasonable people may disagree on weighting or inclusion of specific criteria.
4. No Official Endorsement or Certification: Results do not constitute official endorsement, accreditation, or certification by any classical education organization. They are provided for informational and research purposes only.
5. Potential for Error: Websites may be incomplete, poorly worded, or temporarily inaccurate. Conversely, sophisticated marketing language may create false positives. Human review by parents, educators, or classical education experts is strongly recommended before drawing final conclusions about any school.
6. Data Privacy and Ethics: Only publicly available information was analyzed. No attempts were made to access password-protected areas or collect personal data.
7. No Liability: The authors, developers, and distributors of this audit assume no liability for decisions made on the basis of these results. Users are solely responsible for their own due diligence.
