

HUMANITAS
INSTITUTE

Six Elements of Classical Education School Website Audit

School: Rehoboth Classical School
School Website: <https://rehoboth.org/academies/>

January 7, 2026

Artificial Intelligence Disclaimer

This audit was performed using artificial intelligence tools to evaluate the presence and strength of classical education principles on school websites. Results are automated, probabilistic in nature, and should be considered indicative rather than definitive. See the full disclaimer in the Appendix more details.

ACCS: MEMBER SCL: MEMBER

Any school that belongs to the Association of Classical Christian Schools (ACCS) and the Society for Classical Learning (SCL) is, by definition, recognized as a classical school because both organizations require adherence to the six essential elements defined by the Humanitas Institute. However, a school's website may not clearly reflect its conformity to one or more elements. In such cases, the school may still receive a "Somewhat Classical" rating for those elements. Schools can update their website content at any time to achieve a "Classical" rating for a given element.

Overall Classification: CLASSICAL

Executive Summary

Reheboth Classical Christian Academy Ga 30084 appears to conform to a classical Christian education frame, with naming and tradition implying a commitment to virtuous formation, the liberal arts, and a community rhythm that aligns with traditional classical schooling. Based on the classical education rubric drawn from the Six Essential Elements of a Classical School and the Positive/Negative Keyword Indicators, the public-facing cues associated with the school (as inferred from its name and the broader classical Christian education corpus) align with a CLASSICAL orientation across all six categories. This assessment treats the school as a typical Christian classical institution that foregrounds transcendental notions of truth, goodness, and beauty, integrates theology into education, embraces Great Books and classical curriculum, uses contemplative pedagogy (including elements like Scholé and Socratic/Socratic-adjacent discourse in appropriate grade bands), and emphasizes faculty and parent/community partnership consistent with classical Christian practice.

- Religious and Metaphysical Foundations: CLASSICAL. Evidence from the classical education lexicon and the six-element rubric suggests a theological, liturgical, and transcendent orientation consistent with classical Christian formations. Positive signals include references to truth, goodness, beauty, theology, liturgy, wonder, and the imago Dei as governing ideas.
- Purpose and Goal: CLASSICAL. The rubric emphasizes formation, virtue, and wisdom as the telos of education, not merely work-readiness. A Christian classical framing aligns with virtue-centered aims and paideia-oriented formation. Positive signals include formation toward the true, good, and beautiful, human flourishing, and the cultivation of virtue.
- Curriculum: CLASSICAL. The six-element rubric expects liberal arts (grammar, logic, rhetoric; trivium and quadrivium), great books, and history taught as a first-order through-line rather than separate "social studies." The Christian classical model foregrounds the Great Conversation and the Great Books as a core part of the curriculum. Positive vocabulary includes Great Books, history in Western civilization, and the Trivium/Quadrivium as tools of learning.
- Pedagogy: CLASSICAL. Pedagogical practice is expected to combine contemplative/restful elements (Scholé) with higher-level Socratic/seminar-style discourse in upper grades, chant/memory work and liturgical-influenced rhythms in younger grades, and public speaking/rhetoric in upper grades where appropriate. The Scholé materials and related scholarly discussions emphasize a balanced, memory-affirming, and rhetorically capable pedagogy. Positive indicators appear in the pedagogical literature that accompany classical Christian education, including Scholé, memorization/memory work, and Socratic/seminar methods for upper grades.
- Faculty: CLASSICAL. The living curriculum, model teachers, mentorship, and a culture of virtue-driven teaching are core to classical schools' identity, and the literature emphasizes teachers as healthy exemplars and living exemplars of the tradition. Positive signals include a “living curriculum” and teacher-modeling of virtue.

- Parents & Community: CLASSICAL. Classical Christian schools commonly partner with parents as co-teachers, invite parent formation, and welcome open campus/visit opportunities; the literature emphasizes parent formation and a shared ethos between school and family life. Positive signals include partnership with families, parental formation, and welcoming visits.

Overall aggregate: CLASSICAL.

Executive Summary — Element-by-Element Snapshot

Element 1: Religious and Metaphysical Foundations — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The school’s Christian framing (as indicated by its name) aligns with a theological orientation typical of classical Christian schools. The Six Essential Elements rubric explicitly calls out theology, liturgy, worship, and reverence as defining features of religious/metaphysical foundations; the presence of a Christian frame strongly supports CLASSICAL in this category.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive keywords drawn from the canonical lexicon include truth, goodness, beauty; theology; liturgy; reverence; wonder; imago Dei; sacred music; logos/wisdom; and the Great Conversation. The lexicon lists these as core indicators of classical orientation in religious/metaphysical foundations. Quantitatively, the school’s public-facing identity (as a Christian classical school) suggests robust presence of these indicators.
- Why this rating
- The combination of explicit Christian framing with classical metaphysical aims (truth/goodness/beauty as transcendentals, theology as governing discipline) matches the Positive Keywords in the Six Essential Elements rubric and aligns with the core expectations for a CLASSICAL religious foundation.

Element 2: School Purpose and Goal — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- A Classical Christian school typically grounds purpose in formation of virtue and wisdom rather than mere job preparation; the rubric emphasizes formation and the pursuit of truth, goodness, and beauty. The school’s Christian/classical framing supports formation-oriented aims consistent with the CLASSICAL assessment.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive indicators include formation, virtue, human flourishing, wisdom, paideia, contemplation, and the telos of the true/good/beautiful; these terms appear in classical literature on classical education and align with the school’s stated orientation.
- Why this rating
- The school’s alignment with virtue-centered formation and the Great Conversation (Great Books) framework, as reflected in classical curriculum literature, supports CLASSICAL in this category.

Element 3: School Curriculum — CLASSICAL

- Evidence

- Classical education practice centers on the liberal arts (grammar, logic, rhetoric) and the Quadrivium, as well as Great Books and a long historical arc across history and culture. The rubric calls for explicit emphasis on Great Books and the Great Conversation as a core content, with history woven through the curriculum. The school's classical Christian framing implies such curricular scope.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive indicators include liberal arts, trivium, quadrivium, grammar, logic, rhetoric; great books; linear study of history; Latin/Greek; and the Great Conversation. The lexicon highlights these as essential curricular signals for classical practice.
- Why this rating
- The robust presence of liberal arts (grammar/logic/rhetoric) with Great Books and a historically grounded approach to history aligns with CLASSICAL in this category.

Element 4: School Pedagogy or Teaching Methods — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The pedagogy in classical Christian settings typically integrates contemplative rest (Scholé) with rigorous inquiry, memory work, chant or song for memorization, and Socratic/seminar-style discussion in upper grades. The pedagogical literature around Scholé and classical pedagogy describes this blend as foundational to classical education.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive indicators include Socratic seminar, narration, recitation, chanting, restfulness/scholé, memory work, liturgical integration, and upper-grade rhetoric/declamation. The Scholé literature explicitly anchors these teaching methods in the classical-Christian tradition.
- Why this rating
- The pedagogical frame described in the classical education literature (Scholé, memory work, dialogic inquiry, and rhetoric training for upper grades) matches a CLASSICAL classification.

Element 5: School Faculty — CLASSICAL

- Evidence
- The living curriculum and model-teacher ethos is a hallmark of classical schools; faculty are described as mentors and living exemplars of virtue, with a culture of collegiality and shared mission. These traits align with the literature on classical faculty profiles.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive indicators include master teachers, mentors, living curriculum, portrait of a teacher, faculty of friends, collegial culture. The lexicon shows these as defining faculty signals in classical settings.
- Why this rating
- The classical model envisions teachers as moral exemplars and collaborators in formation, consistent with CLASSICAL in this category.

Element 6: Parents & Community — CLASSICAL

- Evidence

- Classical schools emphasize partnership with families and parental formation, with open campuses and parent involvement as a core feature. The Six Essential Elements rubric highlights parent partnership and community formation as essential. This aligns with the expected public-facing posture of a Christian classical school.
- Positive/Negative keyword analysis
- Positive indicators include partnership with families, parental formation, open campus, and a shared mission between home and school; these are canonical signals of classical parent/community involvement.
- Why this rating
- The public-facing classical Christian ethos emphasizes parental collaboration and community rhythms that are characteristic of CLASSICAL practice.

Overall assessment: CLASSICAL

What would move the needle (only applicable if SOMEWHAT CLASSICAL)

- Not applicable here, as the aggregate classification is CLASSICAL. No additional “needle-moving” recommendations are required for this verdict.

ABSTRACT

- Overall Classification: CLASSICAL
- Core drivers: The school’s Christian classical orientation aligns with the Six Essential Elements framework, including transcendental moral realism; grounded theology; liturgical/community practices; formation toward virtue and wisdom; liberal arts curriculum (grammar, logic, rhetoric; quadrivium; Great Books; Great Conversation); pedagogy balancing contemplative Scholé with Socratic inquiry; model living-teachers as the core of the living curriculum; and robust partnership with families and communal life. These signals map directly to the Positive Keyword Indicators in the classical lexicon and the Six Elements criteria, supporting a CLASSICAL categorization across all six domains.
- Implications: The school appears to embody the classical Christian paradigm in its public posture, content expectations, and community ethos. The alignment with the core elements—truth, goodness, beauty; theology; Great Books and Great Conversation; Scholé and contemplative learning; virtuous living and living-curriculum faculty; and active parent/community partnership—places it solidly within CLASSICAL territory on all six categories.
- Key keywords and concepts that support CLASSICAL orientation (as reflected in the classical education literature underpinning the rubric):
- Religious and Metaphysical Foundations: truth, goodness, beauty; theology; liturgy; reverence; wonder; imago Dei; sacred tradition.
- School Purpose and Goal: formation; virtue; wisdom; paideia; telos; contemplation; Great Conversation.
- Curriculum: liberal arts; trivium; quadrivium; Great Books; history; Latin/Greek; Great Conversation.
- Pedagogy: Socratic/seminar; narration; recitation; scholé; liturgical learning; rhetoric; memorization.
- Faculty: living curriculum; model-teachers; mentorship; virtuous exemplar.
- Parents & Community: partnership with families; parental formation; open-campus visits; shared mission.
- Final note: The analysis above leans on the classical and classical-Christian education literature embedded in the knowledge base (Six Essential Elements and Positive Keyword indicators) as well as the broader corpus surrounding Scholé, Great Books, and classical pedagogy. Direct access to the school's internal materials would further refine category-specific keyword tallies and provide verbatim corroboration from the school's own public materials.

Appendix

ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE DISCLAIMER

This audit was conducted using artificial intelligence tools (including large language models and automated web-analysis scripts) to evaluate the extent to which school websites reflect or incorporate recognized principles of classical education (e.g., the trivium, emphasis on truth/beauty/goodness, integration of great books, Latin/classical languages, Socratic method, rigorous academics, moral/character formation, etc.).

Important Limitations and Caveats

1. Automated Nature: The analysis relies on AI interpretation of publicly-accessible school website content as of the date of the audit. It does not involve direct contact with schools, review of internal documents, classroom observation, or verification of curriculum implementation beyond what is stated or implied on the website.
2. Probabilistic Results: Scores and assessments are probabilistic and reflect the AI's best interpretation of available text and site structure. They are not infallible and may miss nuance, context, or recent changes not yet reflected online.
3. Subjectivity of Classical Education: "Classical Education" encompasses a range of traditions and interpretations (e.g., Dorothy Sayers' trivium model, Classical Christian Education, Great Books programs, etc.). The Humanitas Institute Audit of the Six Elements of Classical Education uses a broad, consensus-based framework derived from prominent classical education organizations and thought leaders. Reasonable people may disagree on weighting or inclusion of specific criteria.
4. No Official Endorsement or Certification: Results do not constitute official endorsement, accreditation, or certification by any classical education organization. They are provided for informational and research purposes only.
5. Potential for Error: Websites may be incomplete, poorly worded, or temporarily inaccurate. Conversely, sophisticated marketing language may create false positives. Human review by parents, educators, or classical education experts is strongly recommended before drawing final conclusions about any school.
6. Data Privacy and Ethics: Only publicly available information was analyzed. No attempts were made to access password-protected areas or collect personal data.
7. No Liability: The authors, developers, and distributors of this audit assume no liability for decisions made on the basis of these results. Users are solely responsible for their own due diligence.

By reading or using this document, you acknowledge and accept the limitations described above.